LESSONS FROM HISTORY, - Whenever the second election during the life of an Administration returned a majority of opposition members to the House, of Representatives, that opposition always carried the Presidential election following next thereafter. Van Buren was elected in 1836, but in 1887 a majority of Whigs was sent to the House who carried General Harrison into the White House by a rousing vote. The Whigs lost their majority in Congress in 1842, and James K. Polk was elected by the Democrats in 1814. In 1846 the the House, and in 1856 Buchanan just slipped in as a minority President ed by it : The President defends his action in Louislann, and declares that he will continue to recognize the government of Kellogg in the absence of any legislation on the part of congress. As a justification of this course he refterates his opinion that the present state of ficers of Louislana received a majority d the votes cast at the election in 1879 He makes much ado about the white lengue organizations, with their milltary drills and menacing demonstrations, as a justification of his employment of troops to interfere with the elections of the southern people. The whole manber of troops employed in the south he estimates at 4,082. But his own susplcion that southern outrages have been manufactured is revealed in the conundrum which he puts, whether there is not "a disposition on one side to mugnify wrongs and outrages, and on the other side to belittle or justify them. For a solution of his question he suggests that congress inquire whether the alleged wrongs to colored citizens for political purposes are real, or whether he reports thereof were manufactured for the occasion." On the reports of Congressman Hays, Marshal Packard and Collector Casoy, his brother in-how, Grant assumed that the outrages wer real and not manufactured, in spite of the carnest denials of the southern people and the proofs of the falsehoods contained in these reports, and sent his ry declined any compensation for his dragoons to overrun Louisiana and Ala. services.

bounn. After the wrong has been done, he asks congress to get up another Ku Klux committee in the expectation that mendacious carpet-daggers and imagniative negresses may manufacture testimony to justify this wanton military interference with the election of the people. On the subject of southern ly paper, outrages, the people have expressed their judgment already at the ballot box, and it differs decidedly from that of President Grant,

On the subject of subsidy the President is extremely wary. There is no mention of subsidy to railroads. As an meauragement to ship building be would not recommend a direct subsidy, out "ample componsation" for carrying the mails on American bullt steamers The practical difference between "direet subsidy," and "ample compensation" it will be difficult to discover, if each should be equal in amount and come from the public treasury. To make the proposition more palatable, the President suggests that the vessels do this would be not be safer, for feur of the extent of his tabilities? Then to do this would to not be safer, for feur of which shall receive this "ample compensation," shall, when built, come up over bases by unscrupidous creditors, to say that all debts and obligations are obliterated in the United States, and to a certain standard for speed, tonnage and other qualities, looking to the gov-erument employing them some time for war purposes. In such an emorgoncy he suggests that the right of taking possession of them should be carefully guarded. All this looks like the recommunitation of an extensive lobby jobfor subsidy under a new name,

The Civil Rights Bill is passed ove in ominous silence. President Grant dilates on topics of minor importance to the extent of woarisome garrulity, but refuses to utter one word on a subjest which has already provoked so much discussion, and will occupy targe share of the deliberations of the tegrity of the untion, and of individpresent session. This sitence will be I believe it is the duty of congress a variously falerpreted, but its most probable meaning is that Grant has not yet made up his own mind what is best for the proceedings in pumphet form, the the advancement of his own political Interests. Dr. M. Valentine, President of Pennsylvania College, was introduced and delivered an excellent lecture on "Seve-cal phases of our Education which need special correction." The Dr. regretted that our educational system was not as practical as it should be, and that children's minds were filled with too extravagant notions of their capabilities, thereby impairing their usefulness in the notive duties of life. He emphasized the statement that unless education was made to assist in daily avocations, rendering people more contented and interested in their work, it is not fulfilling its mission. Study should be so connected with labor as to dignify the latter. In the second part of the lucture the Dr. looked at the moral place of the subject, arguing that the personal and political welfare of a nation depends on the intelligence and virtue of its people. Educated intellect will not alone insure success. The present system of teaching is not carrying this out to the degree which it should. The mind is to structed too far in advance of the beart. If educational systems be wholly within the sphere of the intellect there is great danger of their fall. The friends of eduention will, by this course, kill it by taking from it the only blood it has -the moral principle. The more general knowledge becomes the better; only let the light of Christianity shine through il, and it becomes the pillar of the Republic,

FARM AND GARDEN. LIMING LAND.

At a recent meeting of the Elmira (N. Y.) Farmers' Club there were some statements of experiences in the use of lime. Mr. Fitch said that thirteen years ago he had a field so wretchedly poor that it would produce nothing but surrel, with which it at last became overrun. He plowed it, planted potatores and of course got no crop. The next soason he spread 300 bashels of lime on about six acres, or half the field, this being sufficient to give quite a thick covering. He expected thus to overcome the soriel, regarding lime us an antidote to this plant. He again put in potatoes, was rowarded with a fine harvest, and the sorrel has never since temporared. The land was completely renovated by the single application, and even to this day traces of the lime come up with each repeated turning of the soil. The next year, without further for distinct of the soil of th The same speaker cited another in-

Mr. Armstrong remarked that it was one of the paradoxes of chomistry, as to act more beneficially on limestone or hard water land. Mr. Heller said the best way to apply lime is after the land is plowed in the spring, and about ten days before planting. An argument in favor of this surface application is that it will effect the speedy death of such cut worms as may be waiting for corn in the blade. The value of lime as an element to be used with muck, in composition was too be used with muck of all THE all the promite the state of the promite the promite the contract of the two lines and the promite the contract of the two three two parts and the promite the contract of the two that we have leaded by was then dreadfully with them dreadfully with the work and now that the promite the with the two three two the with the world with the two three two them are the with the world with the with the world with the with the world with the two them are well one of the area of the two them are well one to the two them are with the well beyen and the with the world with the win posting, was touched on, it was said cows will always be on hand at milking that lime had not been much used by members of this club, owing to its cost — 10 or 50 cents a bushel being usked.

TABLE DECORATIONS .- Table deci rations are receiving more and more at-tention in London society. Lord Porterhouse, in an article to one of the papers, speaks of a novelty worthy of notice by our balv readers.

He says he dined one evening at the louse of a distinguished gentleman who had recently married a Russian buly. The table was ontirely covored with moss - the fern-like moss which is plontiful in Covent Garden. There was the usual white cloth, but the only evidence of it was seen in that portion at the sides of the table. Flowers were profusely introduced, and the effect was altogether unique. He stated that this was one of the most ordinary kinds of table decoration in the aristocratic houses of Russin.

A GERMANTOWN housekeeper, writing to the Telegraph, says: Broll a fine, large, tender chicken; when done and while yet warm, cut it from the bones into small pieces, as for chicken salad; put it into a stewpan with one gill of boiling water; then stir together until perfectly smooth, one-quarter of a pound of butter, one tenspoonful of flour and the yolk of one egg, which add to the chicken, half at a time, stirring all well together; then season with salt and popper. After letting it simmer about ton minutes, add half a gill of Madeira, and send to the table bot. We have

Professor Beal showed us, on the in mourning, produce gloom and forefarm of the Agricultural College at boding. Never wear mourning long, Lansing, Michigan, an apple orchard unless you wish to become sail and sorwhich presented the several advantages rowful beyond what nature ever intend-of full cultivation, part culture, and ed." growth in grass. He began the experiments last year, on an orchard 11 years

In other words, these trees, not over 14 feet bigh, had thrown out roots on all sides to a distance of 27 feet. He had placed last year part of the ground over the whole surface, and other pertions with circles of grass left around the trees, six, eight and ten feet in diameter. The ground had only been cul-ameter. The ground had only been cultivated or harrowed this year. All these trees alike were dark green in foliago, with thrifty young shoots over the heads. No difference was discernable between those which stood in ground wholly cultivated, and those that had the six, eight and ten feet circles of grass. Other portions of the orchard were left in grass, with cultivated circles next to the foot of much treath and those that the six cight and ten feet circles of grass. Other portions of the orchard were left in grass, with cultivated circles next to the foot of much treath and the six of the spongo. The bulbs will spout in two or three days and continue to thrive until the flowers come grass.
